INVERSION LINING

Cure-In-Place-Piping (CIPP). Makes up 36 percent of the total trenchless-technology spending, CIPP technology is the most widely used trenchless technique, bolstered in large part by its use in wastewater collection systems. This technique uses a continuous-feed resin-impregnated liner, which is both driven into the existing host pipe & expanded using air or water & cured in position against the inner wall of the pipeline structure to form a new, unbroken surface.
